

Please note that on 31st October 2018 the former Joint Industry Stunt Committee (JISC) criteria for joining ceased to be recognised by the British Stunt Register, for applications received after that date.

The committee have reviewed the syllabus for each sporting discipline and overhauled some of the tests. The new requirements will better prepare trainees for the demands of the stunt industry today.

All training to date remains relevant and we encourage trainees to continue training hard: our standards are high and the tests more stringent. The former JISC syllabus is a useful reference for the basis of a training program until the new criteria is published. It may be requested from our office. Trainees should not take any JISC tests and none should be offered - they will no longer be accepted as part of an application for membership of the BSR.

Further to a significant meeting with UK TV employers we are receiving feedback on our joining criteria and grade system before releasing the information. We expect to publish it during March.

We thank you for your patience and ask you not to call the office for the new criteria at this time. You are welcome to use the web contact form for all enquiries.
